From the London Times, March 2.

The commission of Count Leiningen to Constantinople has terminated more successfully than had been anticipated, for that envoy has returned to Trieste and Vienna, being himself the bearer of the entire compliance of the Porte with his demands. If this intelligence, which has been received from Trieste by a telegraphic despatch, be strictly correct, we sincerely rejoice in the conclusion of an awk ward dispute; and the stories circulated by a certain portion of the Parisian and English press—that Count Leiningen had presented his ultimatum, and left Constantinople with the whole Austrian embany, or that the Turkish government had thrown itself upon the mediation or protection of France and England—happily fall to the ground. We have no reason to suppose that the representatives of France and England at Constantinople were in any way authorized to proffer their mediation on the subjects in dispute, or that the Austrian envoy would have submitted the claims he was instructed to make to the interference of any foreign governments. Indeed, we cannot but suspect, from the sagerness shown in disseminating these erroneous reports, that they originated with a party avowedly anyious to embroil Turker. From the London Times, March 2. suspect, from the eagerness shown in disseminating these erroneous reports, that they originated with a party avowedly anxious to embroil Turkey with the northern courts, and to engage France and England in a preposterous crussade for the maintenance of the Ottoman empire. That is now a favorite scheme with the promoters of insurrection in Hungary and Poland, and it is encouraged by many of the renegades in the military service tion in Hungary and Foland, and it is encouraged by many of the renegades in the military service of the Porte; but it is a plan which would probably prove fatal to Turkey hersell, and might embroil Europe ever the shattered remains of the Ottoman empire, if the political sagacity of the great pow-ers was not on its guard against so clumsy a con-spiracy.

empire, it the political sagacity of the great powers was not on its guard against so clumsy a conspiracy.

Some doubt still exists as to the exact purport and extent of the demands Count Leiningen was instructed to make; but in those points with which we are acquainted, the government of this country had, we believe, already concurred. Lord John Russell, when at the foreign office, had remonstrated forcibly against the expedition to Montenegro, for, as we remarked when first the question arose, it was past endurance that a huge Turkish army should be let loose in midwinter against a hardy tribe of mountaineers, on the very frontiers of Christendom, within sight of the Adriatic sea, only to gratify, as it seemed, the sanguinary ambition of such a general as Omer Pasha. This man was, it seems, a Croat officer in the Austrian service, who a jostatised from his religion, and forsook his country. Such are the leaders who now, more than ever, conduct the Turkish armies, and influence the policy of the Porte; for it is ascertained that a considerable number of these renegades are actually in arms, and commanding troops in the adjacent portions of European Turkey, where they endeavor to conceal their apparatus. tained that a considerable number of these renegades are actually in arms, and commanding troops in the adjacent portions of European Turkey, where they endeavor to conceal their apostacy by increased severity of persecution against the Christian population of these Turco-Sclawonic provinces. The Austrian government required that the operations against Montenegro should cease, and that the deserters and fugitives from the Imperial armies, who have entered the Turkish service and embraced the Mohometan faith, should not be offensively paraded in arms along the frontier, where it is doubtful whether their object is to defend their new country or to attack their old one. It is entirely consistent with good policy and good neighborhood that these grievances should be repressed, and we hope to learn that the ferce onslaught on Montenegro, which has already cost so much blood and misery, for no imaginable object, will now cease by the withdrawal of the As for the demand with reference to the tongues of the land on the Adriatic coast, called Klek and

As for the demand with reference to the tongues of the land on the Adriatic coast, called Klek and Sutorina, we have less accurate information; but it is expressly denied that the Austrians ever demanded the cession of these portions of territory, which would, indeed, have been inadmissible. These strips of land were ceded to Turkey by the treaties of Carlowitz and Parsarowitz, in 1698 and 1718, for the purpose of isolating the territory of the republic of Ragusa from the Venetian territory in Dalmatia. By the 93d article of the treaty of Vienna, Austria acquired the Venetian territories in Istria and Dalmatia, and by the 94th article she acquired the territories which had formed the republic of Ragusa; but she never acquired the tract lying between those territories, which is of the more consequence to Turkey as affording the only direct means of communication from the sea to the Herzegovine and Bosnia. The voluntary cession of territory by the Porte is, moreover, contrary to the laws of Islam, and could neither be asked nor granted. Whatever Count Leiningen's demands were, they were supported by the presence of a considerable serve on the Creation from asked nor granted. Whatever Count Leiningen's demands were, they were supported by the presence of a considerable army on the Croatian frontier, and the Porte is in no condition, either by its internal resources or by its external alliances, to brave such admonitions. The difficulty of its position was further augmented by a knowledge of the facts that considerable movements of troops have recently taken place on the Russian frontier, that Prince Menschikoff has just been appointed to the command of three corps d'armee in the southern provinces of the empire, and that this minister is on his way to Constantinople with a peremptory message relating to the custody of the Holy Shrines by the Greek Church, which is entirely at variance with the firman recently exacted by France. Happily, M. de Lavalette is recalled from the embassy where he has done so much mischief, and he will be forthwith succeeded by M. de la Cour, late French minister at Vienna, a diplomatist of far greater moderation and sagacity. greater moderation and sagacity.

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe has also taken leave pass through both Paris and Vienna, by the desire hemselves in communication with him on the af-airs of the East. We trust, therefore, that what ever may be the fate of Turkey, the perversity and the intrigues of the Divan will not succeed in breaking up that collective and united action of the great powers of Europe, to which they owe a continuance of peace, and Turkey herself a continuance of existence. It is the policy of the Porte alternately to play off one of its supporters against the others, and thus to divide as much as possible the councils which have been so often exerted in its favor. But that is too dear a price to pay for so worthless a result, and the duration of the Turkish when compared with the maintenance of a sound understanding with those continental powers on which we can rely.

We have already intimated that the time is, in our opinion, approaching when the maintenance of the Ottoman empire, in its present form, will be found to be impracticable and acknowledged to be undesirable; but whatever political vicinsitudes the Christian and Sclavonic provinces of Turkey may witness, they can pass under no form of government more barbarous, wasting and concessive ernment more barbarous, wasting, and oppressive, than that which has so long overwhelmed them. We profess, therefore, to feel no anxiety for the maintenance of the Ottoman empire, which bears maintenance of the Ottoman empire, which bears the stamp of a tyrannical past, a worthless pre-sent, and an extinct future. Our solicitude on this question is excited rather by the effects which the dissolution of the Turkish empire may have—whenever that period arrives—upon the union and the pacific relations of the other States of Europe. That is the subject we should rather commend to the reflections of our diplomatists and statesmen, who have hitherto averted their eyes from what they consider an insuperable difficulty. It is a difficulty, however, which will one day force itself upon us; and the question is, whether we are to leave the tottering edifice to fall mole sud, or to provide against such a calamity. It is a matter of far less importance to mankind to preserve the integrity of Turkey than to preserve the friendly relations of Europe. But from the moment that the relations of any of the great powers with the Porte assume a separate, and perhaps menacing character, it is possible that their next move may bring them into direct collision with the reat of Europe. That is an evil to be avoided, if possible, by frank explanations and by collective action. the reflections of our diplomatists and statesmer

DESCRIPTION A BANK.—The telegraph having mnounced that the "Crow Bar bill" had finally passed on Saturday, A. The cashier was engaged with the directors in an adjoining room. Mr. S. yery seen got possession of the vault, and, of course, modern law being in his favor, helped himself to some $5,500 in gold. The bank officers remonstrated, and warned him of the consequences; but Mr. Skelly was in possession, and keeps possession. Had the bank resisted, the new law placed it in the power of the treasurer, with a mob at his heels, to apply force to aid him in the distraint of the taxes claimed. We trust that this irritating source of litigation and violence will soon receive source of litigation and violence will soon receivits quietus one way or another.

More Trouble in the Wigwam.—In the State Journal of yesterday we find a communication over the signature of our Democratic fellow-citizen J. W. Cummins, in which Governor Wright is denounced in terms of the utmost severity. As a specimen of the sarcastic tone of Mr. C., we here quote a single paragraph, from which it seems that he thinks the Governor the prince of perfidy:

"We read that some eighteen hundred years ago one Judas, for the love of gain, was induced to betray the Saviour of the world for thirty pieces of silver. Had Joseph A. Wright lived in that day it is more than likely that Judas would have had competition, and that Joseph would have performed the same service for twenty-nine pieces, such is his inordinate desire for gain and distinction."

American Tract Society.—The Executive Committee met yesterday (Monday) afternoon, Rev. Doctor Knox presiding. Letters were read from Belgium, Switzerland, Germany, Sweden, India, Africa, and China. A final appropriation of three hundred dollars was made, which completes the amount of twenty thousand dollars for foreign countries. The receipts for the last month were $35,139, and for cleven monthe, to March I. $316,294. Grants of publications since April I have amounted to more than 45,000,000 pages. The indebtedness of the society has been largely reduced since the last meeting. The committee adopted an appropriate minute respecting the sudden death of Mr. J. A. Ackley, for eighteen years the faithful depositary of the society. Rev. R. S. Cook, secretary of the society, about to visit Europe, was commissioned as a delegate to the London, Paris, and other European tract societies. [New York Evening Post.]

Preatical Caaff.—Captain Silliman, of the schooner S. M. Waln, at Pernambuco from Philadelphia, reports having been boarded by a schooner, supposed a slaver, in latitude 30 longitude 29, and was robbed of sails, provisions, &c. Captain Silliman states that she appeared to be a Baltimore-built vessel of about one hundred and fifty tons; had seventy or eighty men on board, with short guns on deck. The boat's crew which boarded the S. M. Waln were well armed with pistols and cutlasses. The schooner displayed a Portuguese flag, and the captain was a Spaniard. The schooner had lost her foretopmast, and the boat's crew were making preparations to send that of the S. M. Waln down to replace it, when two large vessels hove in sight, the boat's crew left for their vessel, and she made sail and stood to the eastward.

A CURIOUS ABDUCTION.—Captain Genn, of the schooner Prospect, from St. John's, Porto Rico, was entered at the custom-house to day under peculiar circumstances A few days after leaving port, the vessel was run into by another, when the crew, excepting one man, and the passengers, consisting of the captain's wife and child, under the apprehension excited by the collision, jumped upon the latter, and thereupon both vessels were instantly separated and could not come together again. The captain navigated his schooner safely into this port, but the name of the vessel which into this port, but the name of the vessel which carried off his wife and the crew, or where she was going, or what has become of them, he does not know. It is a singular case of abduction.

LIEN LAW-DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT. visit the southern and European ports to secure as McLean delivered the following as the unanimous opinion of the Court:

The right to file a "mechanica' lien," as it is usually denominated, is claimed by the plaintiff under the act of Congress of March 2d, 1833, entitled "An act to secure to mechanica and others payment for labor done and materials furnished in the erection of buildings in the District of Columbia." The first section of this act defines the persons who shall be entitled to this peculiar security and remedy as follows:

All and every dwelling house or other build.

shall be entitled to this peculiar security and remedy as follows:

All and every dwelling bouse, or other building, bereafter constructed and erected within the city of Washington, in the town of Alexandria, or in Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, shall be subject to the payment of the debts contracted for, or by reason of any work done or materials found and provided by any brickmaker, bricklayer, stonecutter, mason, lime merchant, carpenter, painter and glazier, ironmonger, blacksmith, plasterer, and lumber merchant, or any other person or persons employed in furnishing materials for, or in erecting and constructing such house or other building, before any other lien which originated subsequent to the commencement of such house or other building, or any portion thereof, shall have been constructed under contract or contracts, entered into by the owner thereof, or his or her agent, with any person or persons, no person who may have done work for such experience. tracts, entered into by the owner thereof, or his or her agent, with any person or persons, no person yho may have done work for such contractor or contractors, or furnished materials to him, or on his order or authority, shall have or possess any lien on said house or other building, for work done or materials so furnished, unless the person or persons employed by such contractor to do work on, or furnish materials for, such building, shall, within thirty days after being so employed, give notice in writing, to the owner or owners of such building, or to his or to their agent, that he or they are so employed to work or to furnish materials, and that they claim the benefit of the lien granted by this act.

that they claim the benefit of the lien granted by this act.

Does a master builder, undertaker, or contractor, who undertakes by contract with the owner to erect a building, or some part or portion thereof, on certain terms, come within the letter or spirit of this act, or within any of the classes enumerated, as entitled to this special remedy? Such persons have an opportunity and are capable of obtaining their own securities. They do not labor as mechanics, but superintend work done by others. They are not tradesmen in lumber or other materials for building, but employ others to furnish materials. If such contractor should by accident be a carpenter, or an owner or vender of materials for building, but employ others to furnish materials. If such contractor should by accident be a carpenter, or an owner or vender of lumber, yet he deals not with the owner in this capacity, but as an undertaker who has covenanted for his own securities.

The title to this act shows its policy and intention. It is to secure to "mechanics and others payment for labor done and materials found;" and the persons enumerated in the first section are plainly those mechanics and tradesmen whose personal labor or property have been incorporated into the building, and not the agents, supervisors, undertakers, or contractors who employed them.

The act contemplates two conditions under which such labor and materials may have been furnished. First on the order of the owner, who may act without the intervention of any middle man, and thus become indebted directly to his mechanics and tradesmen; or, secondly, when they have been furnished on the order of a contractor or underturnished on the order of a contractor or underturnished on the order of a contractor or underturnished on the order of a contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor with building, and not to that of the contractor, though the intends to look to the credit of the building and not to that of the contractor, though the materials are often defrauded by insolvent owners and disponent of the contractors. Many build houses on speculation, and, after the labor of the mechanic and the materials are incorporated into them, the owner of ecomes insolvent and sells the building, or encounters them with liens; and thus one portion of his creditors are paid at the expense of the labor and property of others. Or, the solvent owner, in flexibility and design, being the most perfect imitation of the quill ever made. This, together with his new Double Elastic Patent Spring, New York Commercial, Original, Bank Pens, Jenny Linds, Suavetor, and Extra Fine Point; also, his superior, accommodating, and plain Holders of all patterns, ivory and cocoa Letter Stamps, can be procured at his establishment, No. 118 William street, New York.

If precedent were needed to justify this construction of the act of Congress, it may be found in the reports of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, where similar legislation has always received the same construction. NATIONAL THEATRE -To-night is set apart for a benefit to the popular comedian, Mr. Henry C Jordan. A decidedly attractive entertainment is offered-"All that Glitters is not Gold," "Robert Macaire," and the "Jacobite." Mr. Jordan wil be assisted by the services of his fellow-comedian. Mr. Charles Burke; and the bill, aside from the merits of the beneficiare, is one which should com mand a large attendance. We have received a note on the subject from visitor to the theatre, which we subjoin:

THE LADIES' UNION BENEVOLENT AND Employment Society's Stores, both on Seventh street and Capitol Hill, South A street, are well replenished with garments made up by their industrious poor, and would invite all in want of such articles to call and purchase. But a very small profit is put upon each article made up. The following list will show the principal articles for sale in the stores: Shirts, (white and colored,) Pantaloons, Drawers, Vests, Sacks, Round Coats, Morning Gowns, &c. Ladies' Dresses made up to order, and a variety of useful articles of women and children's clothing, such as Shirts, Chemises, Bonnets, Hoods, Collars, Aprons, Capes, Joses, Sacks, Corsets, &c.

Families requiring articles of this in the store of the National Theatre with so much credit and applause, an ununces his second annual benefit this (Thursday) evening. Mr. Jordan is a modest man, of great merit, and deserves a rousing benefit. He offers an attractive bill, and it is hoped that the numerous a time amused and delighted by his comicalities and drolleries, will remember to turn out this capital transport of the theatre, which we subjoin:

"Jordan's Benefit.—It is deemed sufficient merely to call attention to the fact that this popular and humorous comedian, who has for two long and humorous comedian, who has for two long articles his cond annual benefit this (Thursday) municipal series with so much credit and applause, an nunces his second annual benefit this (Thursday) and the stores are remained and deserves a rousing benefit. He offers an attractive bill, and it is hoped that the numerous and delighted by his comicalities and drolleries, will remember to turn out this constant and series and drolleries, will remember to turn out this constant and series and drolleries, will remember to turn out this constant and series are successed and remember to turn out this constant and series and series are successed and remember to turn out this constant and series are successed and series and series are successed and series are succes

KENDALL AND DICKINSON'S ETHIOPIAN MIN STRELS .- This delightful troupe, composed of fourteen persons, having performed thirteen con-secutive weeks in Baltimore, will make their appearance in this city in the course of the ensuing week. In addition to their minstrelsy, they introduce imitations of the celebrated Chinese jugglers, which are said to be better than the originals. Their African statuary is severe upon the risibles of an auditory, and their breakdown dances create "infinite mirth" to the admirers of Terpsichore. We anticipate some pleasant evenings anon.

BUILDING OPERATIONS have commenced in vaious parts of the city. Brick and frame houses re starting up in various directions, while numerous piles of prick and mortar and hewn timber indicate that more are to follow. We would suggest a caution, however, to those interested, no unnecessarily to block up the public thoroughfares. as our efficient Mayor will not be likely to counenance any infractions of the ordinance which limits building materials to one third of the street.

RESIDENCES OF DISTINGUISHED OFFICERS.—We learn that the Secretaries of State, of War, and the Postmaster General either have made, or certainly intend making, their residence in our pleasant sister city of Georgetown. The Hon. R. Toombahas, we understand, leased the large and beautiful mansion and grounds on the heights, the residence of the late Colonel Carter. For healthiness and picturesque beauty the heights of Georgetown have few equals anywhere, and superior nowhere.

MORE NEW SPRING GOODS.—P. J. STEER, Merchant Tailor, Seventh street, has just received his new Spring Goods, and wishes all his patrons and the public to know that, for the extent and beauty of his stock, he has never before had the pleasure to exhibit one that would compare with it. In truth, he fell upon a stock so sorpassingly beautiful that he could not resist the temptation to buy largely, and he fears too largely. He will therefore offer the greatest possible inducements to purchasers, and at the same time guarantee the highest satisfaction to those who order clothing, in regard to fit, finish, and style.

The style of our work was never before so clegant and tasteful as it is now, since we have a separate cutter exclusively devoted to each garment; by which means alone perfection can be obtained in that important branch.

We have also the most complete stock of Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, such as Shirts, Stocks, Gloves, Collars, Cravats, Scarfs, &c.
